

An aerial photograph showing a complex highway interchange. The Northern Metropolis Highway (San Tin Section) is the main road running from the top center towards the bottom right. It features multiple lanes and several overpasses. To the left, the Tsing Long Highway branches off, and to the right, the Yuen Long Highway branches off. The interchange is surrounded by a river, greenery, and urban development, including residential buildings and industrial structures. A north arrow is visible in the top left corner.
